

Declaration of Creative Transformation

I, Paolo Migliorini, as the founder and creator of the application Vote The Goat, hereby declare the following:

1) Image Origin

- The facial images used within the app have been generated/modified using cartoon-style rendering software, based on publicly available sources or materials not subject to restrictive copyright.
- These images do not faithfully represent real-life individuals, and present a significant degree of visual alteration such that they cannot be directly linked to the person depicted.

2) Transformative Elements

Each image has undergone substantial modifications, including but not limited to:

- Alteration of the background.
- Change of clothing (e.g., addition of a jacket not present in the original software output).
- Color and stylistic reworking of facial features.

3) Intended Use

All visual elements are used exclusively for informational, narrative, and entertainment purposes.

There is no intention of direct commercial exploitation or monetization based on the identity of depicted individuals.

Usage aligns with the principles of journalistic reporting, information rights, and free creative expression as recognized under current legislation.

4) Fonts and Other Assets

The application uses fonts and graphic elements authorized by third-party providers. Explicit written permission has been obtained from the company that created the font used in the app's logo.

5) Proactive Commitment

The undersigned commits to cooperating with any entity or rights holder seeking clarification, modification, or removal of content.

All such requests will be assessed in good faith, in accordance with copyright law and personal image rights.

6) Advertising

In addition, we confirm that no athlete names or images featured in the App are ever associated with sponsored content, advertising, or third-party branding. Ads are clearly separated from user-generated content and in no way imply endorsement.
